

ORPHANAGE DESTROYED BY FIRE

Sixty-Two Children Carried Out in Their Night Clothes
Saturday Night

ONE OVERCOME BY FRIGHT

Heroic Work of Washerwoman No Doubt Saves Many Lives—Orphanage Need of Clothing and Money

Flames sweeping through the Mary Marilla Hobbs building of the Methodist orphanage at Lake Bluff Saturday night between 8 and 9 o'clock, cost the life of a 2-year-old boy and damaged the structure. Richard Miller, forgotten in the mad rush as half a dozen heroic deaconesses, assisted by neighbors, carried his twin brother and sixty-one other children to safety, was the victim. He had almost died of fright on the third floor of the blazing building before it was discovered that he was not among those who had been carried out.

Just as Miss Luella Hager, house mother of this floor, missed Richard, August Shinsky, head of the volunteer fire fighters, staggered from the dormitory bearing the baby in his arms. Within an hour Richard was dead and the brother who had been saved was left without blood kin.

Following the fire, which broke out between 8 and 9 o'clock Saturday night, appeals for aid were sent to the Methodist churches of the North Shore and already clothing and money is beginning to pour in on the orphanage.

Miss Lucy Judson, superintendent of the orphanage, was seated in the administration offices which occupy part of the Hobbs building when she heard a cry of "fire." Miss Hager had discovered the blaze in a storeroom. She tried to extinguish it and called a warning when it got beyond control.

Immediately the building was in an uproar.

So rapidly did the blaze spread that it was out of the question to try to save personal property. With one or two exceptions children already were in bed and their clothing was consumed.

As rapidly as the children were carried from the burning building they were taken to the Wadsworth cottage, where the boys had been quartered. Funds for their relief are being raised by Lake county as well as by the churches.

Aid was sent from Evanston and appeal has been made to the Chicago churches.

"Except for the breaking out of scarlet fever in the hospital Richard would have been alive today," said Miss Judson. "He had been suffering from pneumonia and was removed from the hospital two days ago on account of a fever case."

At the coroner's inquest physicians testified that pneumonia had weakened the boy's heart and that it gave way under the shock.

Richard and his brother Ralph were picked up friendless in the streets by an agent of the Foundlings' home in Chicago four months ago and were sent to the orphanage.

The damage to the building amounted to about $5,000. James H. Hobbs, husband of the woman in whose memory the orphanage was erected, stated that it would be restored as soon as possible.

Mrs. Kate Dyer, washerwoman, was nearing her home across from the orphanage about 8 o'clock Saturday evening. She saw smoke issuing from the top floor of the three story orphanage building, and dropped a basket of clothes she was carrying. She started on a line for the orphanage door, burst in with a cry among the unsuspecting occupants of the lower floors and dashed up the stairs.

She soon arrived at the imperiled ward. The children had gone to bed. Many were asleep. Their attendants, four in number, heard the cries of Mrs. Dyer as she ran through the building and came running after her from the lower floor. They found the room—it is really half attic—heavy with smoke. From the midst stumbled the washerwoman, three screaming children tucked under her arms.

PATIENT SUFFERER GONE

Mrs. Charles R. Thorn Dies at Her Home in this Village Sunday Morning

Sunday morning of this week, at her home in this village at the hour of nine o'clock Mrs. Charles R. Thorn quietly passed into that sleep that knows no awakening. An intense sufferer for many months she patiently waited for the end, fully realizing from the first that the thread of life would soon be broken, she without a murmur accepted the inevitable and calmly directed the affairs of her household as far as her strength would allow. Tranquilly she talked of her departure from life and expressed many wishes to be carried out at her demise.

Miss Tina Walsh was born at Fox Lake and there she grew to womanhood, commanding the highest respect of all. When a young woman she joined the rank of public school teachers and achieved marked success in her chosen vocation, leaving behind as she retired from the work a large number of loyal scholars, many of whom now men and women grown came long distances to attend the last sad rites of her whom they had never forgotten.

On the twenty-fifth day of Nov. 1896, she was united in marriage to Charles R. Thorn and for a short time their home was at Lake Villa. Thirteen years ago they removed to Antioch and this village has since been their home. A devout member of the Roman Catholic faith her entire life has been that of a Christian, doing all in her power to aid in all matters pertaining to the church.

She was an active member of Olson Camp, number 469, R. N. A. having transferred here from Cedar Lake Camp, number 460. In this order she was an influential worker, filling various offices with accuracy and putting forth every effort for the betterment of the order. For three years she acted as marshal and had been chosen to serve as vice oracle, from which position she was taken by illness.

She is survived by her husband, two sisters, Mrs. Ed Renchan of Round Lake and Mrs. John Boyle of McHenry and one brother John of Fox Lake, besides many other relatives and a wide circle of friends.

The funeral services were held in St. Peter's church Wednesday forenoon at eleven o'clock. Rev. Father Lynch saying high mass. A large number of friends attending, in fact so large was the gathering that after every available place in the church was filled about seventy-five were obliged to remain outside. The remains were interred in St. Mary's cemetery at Fox Lake.

FIND WAGONLOAD OF PURE COPPER BURIED DEEPLY

When Ralph Mulholland, contractor for the fencing and drainage on the McKeown places near the Five Points was last week excavating for a building pier his workmen unearthed a unique copper mine that will net a tidy sum. In digging the hole for the pier one of the picks struck a rough, round, hard pebble and as the end struck the surface a glistening scratch was opened, revealing the fact that the pebble was pure copper.

A whole wagon load of the cobbles of copper was taken out of the hole and will be sold.

It is believed that the copper is either the relic of some prehistoric Indian cache or that recent thefts of wire from the North Shore Electric company and Chicago Telephone lines have been rudely melted into ingots by the gang of thieves and then buried on the McKeown place, in the out of way spot in which they were found.

How Hindus Obtain Fire.

Fire is obtained for the important Hindu ceremony of Yanga by a curious method, says a writer in the Strand, matches not being considered holy. The priest holding the two ends of a piece of cord coiled round a vertical rod, the lower end of which fits into a groove cut out in the block of wood in which the rod rests, by a churning motion causes it to rotate very rapidly, it being meanwhile kept in position by the second priest by means of a horizontal handle with a hole in which the rod turns. The friction between the rod and the lower block of wood after a short time sets fire to the latter. This fire, by timely nourishment, is developed into a glorious flame. The instrument is considered very sacred by the orthodox Hindus. They, of course, kept grumbling all the while.

Deer Going to School.

Children attending the Center school in Barhamsted, Conn., were astounded, as well as the teacher, the other day, to see deer at the school house windows. The session was temporarily interrupted to permit the pupils to count the herd, which numbered 24.

POWDER MILLS IN COUNTY

Secret Emissaries of Pleasant Prairie Powder Trust Try
for Site Here

NO LAW TO PREVENT IT

Select Two Prospective Sites, One on State Line and One Near Village of Winthrop Harbor

Secret emissaries of the E. L. Du Pont De Nemours Powder company, of Delaware, the owner of the big 200 acre plant which blew up at Pleasant Prairie early in March, shook five states, and caused $2,500,000 damages have selected a new site for fresh mills to be constructed on the Illinois side of the state line.

Sending men formerly employed at Pleasant Prairie to the mills at Hibbard, Minn., as a blind, the agents of the company have been working out in Lake county from Winthrop Harbor for a week and have, it is reported, closed an option on a 100 acre tract.

Taking the bull by the horns, petitions against locating of the mills along the state line have started at Zion City, Winthrop Harbor and will soon be started in Waukegan.

Due to the fact that there is no Illinois prohibitory law, petitions and an emergency legislative enactment are the only things that can save the county from the menace of the tons of dynamite and powder, likely to go up without warning at any moment.

Men suspected of being agents of the company were met at Winthrop Harbor as late as Friday by a cabman of Zion City and driven through northeastern Lake county to view different places spoken of for a site for the mills.

One is two miles west of the Chicago and Milwaukee electric road and south of the Wisconsin line.

The other is west of the village of Winthrop Harbor on broad, flat, rather marshy land there.

It is declared that 100 acres have been placed under option and that the deal is being rapidly closed.

The two or three emissaries of the company on the job as land agents are playing the original claim act as far as disclosing their object in getting the land is concerned.

Those who have been approached by them are equally mum and will neither affirm or deny that the Pleasant Prairie powder mills are to be moved across the state line into Illinois.

Agents of the company are particular to choose only spots which are lonely and removed from the main traveled ways, their sole wish being apparently to get simply some place that can be connected with switch tracks and a railroad system, which is why the spot west of Winthrop Harbor is favored.

Near passage of a drastic law providing that not more than 125,000 pounds of black powder and no dynamite shall be kept in storage, and that a monthly inspection by county officials shall be made of all powder mills to see that the law is being obeyed has driven the company from Wisconsin into Illinois.

WAUCONDA MAN ENDS OWN LIFE BY HANGING

Will M. Clough was Friday morning found hanging by the neck in his barn dead, and no reasonable cause can thus far be assigned for the suicide.

Clough was a well to do farmer of the Wauconda district. A landed proprietor, his affairs were in perfect order. Apparently his health, too, was good. It is not known whether he had any cause for worry or not, but it is not believed that he had. He leaves to survive him the widow and one daughter, Miss Bessie Clough. The family is widely known and respected. Clough was always a hard-working, frugal man. He was in Waukegan only six weeks ago on legal business. He was between 50 and 60 years of age.

STRIKE AT CORN PRODUCTS

Strike is Growing at the Waukegan
Corn Products Mill
and Many Quit Jobs

SEVENTY MEN ARE NOW OUT

Superintendent Ebert of the Refinery Says
That the Company is Not Able to Pay Increase Demanded

The strike at the Corn Products Refining company at Waukegan was augmented Tuesday evening when the night force of firemen did not show up for work. All told there are fifty or more men out. Their places have been filled by new men, according to a statement of Superintendent Ebert and he says that the plant has in no way been crippled by the strike.

One of the leading strikers declared that the strike had been called because the firemen feel that they are entitled to a raise of two and a half cents an hour. They were getting twenty cents an hour. At first it was the feeling that they should hold out for a raise to twenty-five cents an hour but at a meeting held on the south side it was decided that they would ask merely for a raise of two and one-half cents.

Superintendent Ebert when informed of this action declared: "We feel that we are paying the men all the money that the job is worth and we do not feel able to raise their wages." When asked as to whether or not the strikers would be allowed to return to their jobs if they agree to work for their old scale of wages, Mr. Ebert declared that he was not in a position to say until he gets instructions from headquarters.

Fearing that there might be some sort of a demonstration Assistant Chief of Police Thomas Tyrrell and a few members of his force together with watchmen from the plant were on guard at the gates. The strikers made no move to create trouble and when ordered away from the premises they left with as much grace as possible. They made no attempt, so far as known to intimidate the men who had taken their positions.

"We are not looking for trouble—all we want is a raise in wages," one of the leaders declared.

He admitted that the strike has been brewing for some time. The men have talked it over among themselves, he said, and have agreed that they were not getting enough money for their services.

Three delegates were sent to Supt. Ebert with a request that their demand for more wages be granted. He talked to them kindly, told them that the company feels that it is paying the men all that the job is worth and that if they were not satisfied that they were at liberty to quit.

FAMOUS LIBEL SUIT TO BE RETRIED

The famous libel suit of Phillip W. Mothersill against General Overseer Wilbur Glenn Voliva of Zion City, which had its birth in the circuit court four years ago, will again be placed on the docket of the circuit court at Woodstock.

The suit grew out of the expression "Flip the pipp from their bills," which it is said was placed upon a placard and circulated about Zion City four years ago. Mothersill started suit for libel against Voliva and the case was tried. The verdict was for $14,000 against the general overseer.

A new trial was secured along with a change of venue by Attorney G. W. Field for Voliva, and the case started at Woodstock. The verdict there was for $20,000 damages but Judge Wright cut the verdict in half. The matter was taken to the appellate court, and the decision reversed, and the case remanded back for trial. The case now goes again to the Woodstock circuit for the second time.

SUMMER HOME BURNED

Cottage at Fox Lake Destroyed Sunday Night—John Hagge Loses Barn

Two bad fires in the southeastern part of the county caused a total loss of over $5,000 and one to the northwest nearly $3,000. Two stores in Highland, one a shoe store and the other a fruit store, were burned out in a fire which started in some mysterious manner in the shoe store of A. Reid about 5:30 o'clock.

In Deerfield, a little to the west of Highland Park, fire destroyed a barn, three head of horses, and three cows, together with many sets of harness, belonging to John Hagge, a farmer.

The origin of this fire is a mystery. It is claimed that but a year ago some of the children of Mr. Hagge set fire to the barn accidentally, and as the same children were seen playing in the region of the barn but a short time before the fire was discovered, it is claimed by other residents of the vicinity that it is likely that the children set the barn afire this time.

Out in the northwestern part of the county another fire lighted up the skies for many miles. A summer home, the property of F. W. Cornish, Chicago, situated on Crabapple Island, at Fox Lake, about a mile from shore, was destroyed by fire of a mysterious origin. The family of Mr. Cornish, consisting of wife and two children, together with Mr. Cornish, had visited the cottage Sunday with a view of locating at the place for the summer.

The house had been furnished, and the time was spent in arranging affairs at the house, preparatory to removing from Chicago.

They had no fire in the house while there, but hardly had they seated themselves in the train at Fox Lake than it was discovered that their cottage was on fire. The fire department of Fox Lake was called out, but there was no way to get the apparatus from the mainland to the island. Several of the villagers went out in boats, but there was nothing to be done.

The cottage was a two story house, of frame construction, and burned like tinder. The flames and glare from the fire could be seen almost to McHenry. The house was entirely consumed, the loss totaling close to $3,000.

FORMER LAKE COUNTY MAN PASSES AWAY

Henry H. Gage, a former resident of Lake county and after whose father Gages Corners was named, is dead at his home in Chicago, the death taking place Monday. Henry Gage was the son of John and Portia Gage, who resided in this county prior to the Civil war. Henry Gage was born in Chicago, March 2, 1842.

When the boy was 4 years of age, the family moved into Lake county, they settling in that section of the county now known as Gages Corners, near Gages Lake. Mr. Gage owned extensive farms in the region of the corners of the lake and the corners of the road, and the settlement was named after him.

Here the family resided until the end of the Civil war. Henry Gage enlisted in the 96th Illinois Volunteers, and served throughout the war. When mustered out at the last of the struggle Henry settled in Chicago where he started in the real estate business. In this business he has remained until recently when failing health forced retirement.

Henry Gage was a commander of the G. A. R. Memorial association, and a member of the Hamilton club of Chicago. He is survived by the widow, Mary Gage, three sons, Edward, Stanley and Lloyd, and one daughter, Mrs. William Lee, all of Chicago.

A Gas Hint.

Sometimes the gas will burn unevenly—very low at one side and with a long, thin stream at the other. If the burner is examined when the gas is turned off particles of dust or other foreign matter will be found in it. Run a bit of cardboard through the tip and the gas will burn more evenly.

Saved the Shamrock.

Michael Donnelly, twenty-two, an Irish immigrant quarantined in Cleveland, O., for smallpox, when told that all of his personal effects must be burned, succeeded in inducing the health officials to exempt a shamrock he had brought with him.

FOX LAKE WINS PRIZE AT EXHIBIT

Is Presented With $350 Loving Cup by Land Show in Chicago Last Week

SPLENDID SHOWING MADE

Only Town in County to Have Exhibit and Much Credit is Due President
Bryon for Success of Village

The village of Fox Lake is the only Lake County municipality which displayed enough interest and progressiveness to be an exhibitor in the big real estate show held last week in the Coliseum, Chicago.

The exhibit of Fox Lake is one of the finest at the show. It is located at the extreme north end of the building, at the end of one of the main aisles, and the arrangement and whole idea of the display is one which attracts more than average interest among spectators. The background of the exhibit is a large perspective of the Fox Lake region, showing Fox Lake, Nippersink, Pistakee and other nearby lakes. The map is colored and shows up every feature of the district in fine shape.

At the base of the huge map are many stuffed feathered fowl, indicating that the region abounds in birds of the sort shown. In fact, this seems to be one of the features which the villagers wish to impress upon visitors—that there are birds of all sorts in that region.

As one enters the booth, he is confronted with a sign which reads:

"The Fox Lake region (only 50 miles from Chicago) contains the greatest variety of birds and water fowl of any locality in the United States. The only Egyptian lotus beds in the world (outside of Egypt) are in the Fox Lake region."

Potted plants, flags, etc., are used about the exhibit and at one end of the display room, is an exhibit of a real estate firm which calls attention to the bargains it offers in lots, and summer homes.

President John G. Brown of the village of Fox Lake was on the ground at the time, having personal charge of the exhibit and doing all he can to advertise the village for which he has worked so hard since he became president several years ago. That the village is one of the exhibitors in the show and no other Lake county town is shown, indicates that Fox Lake is alive and doing while others are standing by waiting for people to come to them of their own accord. When anything needs boosting for his town, President Brown is always on the ground, ready to boost.

The Fox Lake exhibit at the real estate show was awarded a prize of $350 by popular vote for the most attractive booth at the show, the prize being in the form of a loving cup.

SYNOPSIS.

James Wilson or Jimmy as he is called by his friends, Jimmy was reticent and looked shorter than he really was. His ambition in life was to be taken seriously, but people steadily refused to do so, his art is considered a huge joke, except to himself. If he asked people to dinner everyone expected a frolic. Jimmy marries Bella Knowles; they live together a year and are divorced. Jimmy's friends arrange to celebrate the first anniversary of his divorce. The party is in full swing when Jimmy receives a telegram from his Aunt Selma, who will arrive in four hours to visit him and his wife. He neglects to tell her of his divorce. Jimmy takes Kit into his confidence, he tries to devise some way so that his aunt will not learn that he has no longer a wife. He suggests that Kit play the hostess for one night, be Mrs. Wilson pro tem. Aunt Selma arrives and the deception works out as planned. Jimmy's Jan servant is taken ill. Bella, Jimmy's divorced wife, enters the house and asks Kit who is being taken away in the ambulance. Bella insists it is Jim. Kit tells her Jim is well and is in the house. Harbison steps out on the porch and discovers a man tacking a card on the door. He demands an explanation. The man points to the placard and Harbison sees the word "Smallpox" printed on it. He tells him the guests cannot leave the house until the quarantine is lifted. The guests suddenly realize their predicament, the women shed tears, the men consider it a good joke. The all important question arises as to who is to prepare the meals and perform the other household duties. Harbison finally solves the matter. After the lifting of the quarantine several letters are found in the mail box under the door. One is addressed to Henry, Cleveland, Quebec, Chile, which was written by Harbison. He describes minutely of their incarceration, also of his infatuation for Mrs. Wilson. Aunt Selma is taken ill with a gripe. Betty acts as nurse. Harbison finds Kit sulking on the roof. She tells him that Jim has been treating her outrageously. Harbison fully believing that she is Mrs. Wilson, tells her that she doesn't mean the things she is saying about her husband. Kit starts downstairs, when suddenly she is grasped in the arms of a man who kisses her several times. She believes that Harbison did it and is humiliated. Aunt Selma tells Jimmy that her cameo brooch and other articles of jewelry have been stolen. She accuses Betty of the theft. The following morning Jimmy was in a rage. The papers printed a story about the incarceration of the party, and that one of the guests had attempted to escape by means of laying a board across the roof to the adjoining house, but was frustrated by a detective who fired a revolver at him. Jimmy tells Aunt Selma all about the strange happenings, but she persists in suspecting Betty of the theft of her valuables.

But what the cook had told about Bella and Jimmy was not divulged, for the Harbison man caught him up with a jerk and sent Flannigan, grumbling, with his rug to the roof.

It did not seem possible to carry on the deception much longer, but if things were bad now, what would they be when Aunt Selma learned she had been lied to, made ridiculous, generally deceived? And how would I be able to live in the house with her when she did know? Luckily, every one was so puzzled over the mystery in the house that numbers of little things that would have been absolutely damning were never noticed at all. For instance, my asking Jimmy at luncheon that day if he took cream in his coffee! And Max coming to the rescue by dropping his watch in his glass of water, and creating a diversion and giving every body an opportunity to laugh by saying not to mind, it had been in soak before.

Just after luncheon Aunt Selma brought me some undergarments of Jim's to be patched. She explained at length that he had always worn out his undergarments, because he always squirmed around so when he was sitting. And she showed me how to lay one of the garments over a pillow to get the patch in properly.

It was the most humiliating moment of my life, but there was no escape. I took my sewing to the roof, while she went away to find something else for me to do when that was finished, and I sat with the thing on my knee and stared at it, while rebellious tears rolled down my cheeks. The patch was not the shape of the hole at all, and every time I took a stitch I sewed it fast to the pillow beneath. It was terrible. Jim came up after a while and sat down across from me and watched, without saying anything. I suppose what he felt would not have been proper to say to me. We had both reached the point where adequate language failed us. Finally he said:

"I wish I were dead."

"So do I," I retorted, jerking the thread.

"Where is she now?"

"Looking for more of these." I indicated the garment over the pillow, and he giggled. "Please don't squirm," I said coldly. "You will wear out your—lingerie, and I will have to mend them."

He sat very still for five minutes, when I discovered that I had put the patch in crosswise instead of lengthwise and that it would not fit. As I jerked it out no sneezed.

"Oh, sneeze," I added venomously.

"You will tear your buttons off, and I will have to sew them on." "Don't sit, don't sneeze," he repeated. "Don't stand, I suppose, for fear I will wear out my socks. Here, give me that. If the fool thing has to be mended, I'll do it myself."

He went over to a corner of the parapet and turned his back to me. He was very much offended. In about a minute he came back, triumphant, and held out the result of his labor. I could only gasp. He had puckered up the edges of the hole like the neck of a bag, and had tied the thread around it. "You—you won't be able to sit down," I ventured.

"Don't have any time to sit," he retorted promptly. "Anyhow, it will give some, won't it? It would if it was tied with elastic, instead of thread. Have you any elastic?"

Lollie came up just then, and Jim took himself and his mending downstairs. Luckily, Aunt Selma found several letters in his room that afternoon while she was going over his clothes, and as it took Jim some time to explain them, she forgot the task she had given me altogether.

When Lollie came up to the roof, she closed the door to the stairs, and coming over, drew a chair close to mine.

"Have you seen much of Tom today?" she asked, as an introduction.

"I suppose you mean Mr. Harbison, Lollie," I said. "No—not any more than I could help. Don't whisper, he couldn't possibly hear you. An if it's scandal I don't want to know it."

"Look here, Kit," she retorted, "you needn't be so superior. If I like to talk scandal, I'm not so sure you aren't making it."

That was the way right along: I was making scandal; I brought them there to dinner; I let Bella in!

And, of course, Anne came up then, and began on me at once.

"You are a very bad girl," she began. "What do you mean by treating Tom Harbison the way you do? He is heart-broken."

"I think you exaggerate my influence over him," I retorted. "I haven't treated him badly, because I haven't paid any attention to him."

Anne threw up her hands.

"There you are!" she said. "He worked all day yesterday fixing this place for you—yes, for you, my dear, I am not blind—and last night you refused to let him bring you up."

"He told you!" I flamed.

"He wondered what he had done. And as you wouldn't let him come within speaking distance of you, he came to me."

"I am sorry, Anne, since you are fond of him," I said. "But to me he is impossible—intolerable. My reasons are quite sufficient."

"Kit is perfectly right, Anne," Lella

Fell to Work Vigorously.

broke in. "I tell you, there is something queer about him," she added in a portentous whisper.

Anne stiffened.

"He is perfect," she declared. "Of good family, warm-hearted, courageous, handsome, clever—what more do you ask?"

"Honesty," said Lella hotly. "That a man should be what he says he is."

Anne and I both stared.

"It is your Mr. Harbison," Lella went on, "who tried to escape from the house by putting a board across to the next roof!"

"I don't believe it," said Anne. "You might bring me a picture of him, board in hand, and I wouldn't believe it."

"Don't then," Lollie said cruelly.

"Let him get away with your pearls; they are yours. Only, as sure as anything, the man who tried to escape from the house had a reason for escaping, and the papers said a man in evening dress and light overcoat. I found Mr. Harbison's overcoat today lying in a heap in one of the maid's rooms, and it was covered with brick dust all over the front. A button had even been torn off."

"Pooh!" Anne said, when she had recovered herself a little. "There isn't any reason, as far as that goes, why Flannigan shouldn't have worn Tom's overcoat, or—any of the others."

"Flannigan!" Lella said loftily. "Why, his arms are like piano legs; he couldn't get into it. As for the others, there is only one person who would fit, or nearly fit, that overcoat, and that is Dallas, Anne."

While Anne was choking down her wrath, Lella got up and darted out of the tent. When she came back she was triumphant.

"Look," she said, holding out her hand. And on her palm lay a lightish brown button. "I found it just where the paper said the board was thrown out, and it is from Mr. Harbison's overcoat, without a doubt."

Of course I should not have been surprised. A man who would kiss a woman on a dark staircase—a woman he had known only two days—was capable of anything.

"Kit has only been a little keener than the rest of us," Lollie said. "She found him out yesterday."

"Upon my word," said Anne indignantly, preparing to go, "if I didn't know you girls so well, I would think you were crazy. And now, just to offset this, I will tell you something. Flannigan told me this morning not to worry; that he has my pearl collar spotted, and that young ladies will have their jokes!"

Yes, as I said before, it was a cheerful, joy-producing situation.

I sat and thought it over after Anne's parting shot, when Lella had flounced downstairs. Things were closing in; I gave the situation 24 hours to develop. At the end of that time Flannigan would accuse me openly of knowing where the pearls were; I would explain my silly remark to him, and the mine would explode—under Aunt Selma.

I was sunk in dejected reverie when some one came on the roof. When he was opposite the opening in the tent, I saw Mr. Harbison, and at that moment he saw me. He paused uncertainly, then he made an evident effort and came over to me.

"You are—better today?"

"Quite well, thank you."

"I am glad you find the tent useful. Does it keep off the wind?"

"It is quite a shelter"—frigidly. He still stood, struggling for something to say. Evidently nothing came to his mind, for he lifted the cap he was wearing, and, turning away, began to work with the wiring of the roof. He was clever with tools; one could see that. If he was a professional gentleman-burglar, no doubt he needed to be. After a bit, finding it necessary to climb to the parapet, he took off his coat, without even a glance in my direction, and fell to work vigorously.

One does not need to like a man to admire him physically, any more than one needs to like a racehorse or any other splendid animal. No one could deny that the man on the parapet was a splendid animal; he looked quite big enough and strong enough to have tossed his slender bridge across the gulf to the next roof, without any difficulty, and co-ordinate enough to have crossed it with a flourish to safety.

Just then there was a reading, tearing sound from the corner and a muttered ejaculation. I looked up in time to see Mr. Harbison throw up his arms, make a futile attempt to regain his balance, and disappear over the edge of the roof. One instant he was standing there, splendid, superb; the next, the corner of the parapet was empty, all that stood there was a broken, splintered post, and a tangle of wires.

I could not have moved at first; at least, it seemed hours before the full significance of the thing penetrated my dazed brain. When I got up I seemed to walk, to crawl, with leaden weights holding back my feet.

When I got to the corner I had to catch the post for support. I knew somebody was saying: "Oh, how terrible!" over and over. It was only afterward that I knew it had been myself. And then some other voice was saying: "Don't be alarmed. Please, don't be frightened. I'm all right."

I dared look over the parapet finally, and instead of a crushed and unrecognizable body, there was Mr. Harbison, sitting about eight feet below me, with his feet swinging into space and a long red scratch from the corner of his eye across his cheek. There was a sort of mansard there, with windows, and just enough coping to keep him from rolling off.

"I thought you had fallen—all the way," I gasped, trying to keep my lips from trembling. "—Oh, don't dangle your feet like that!"

He did not seem at all glad of his escape. He sat there gloomily, peering into the gulf beneath.

"If it wasn't so—er—messy and generally unpleasant," he replied without looking up, "I would slide off and go the rest of the way."

"You are childish," I said, severely. "See if you can get through the window behind you. If you cannot, I'll come down and unfasten it." But the window was open, and I had a chance to sit down and gather up the scattered ends of my nerves. To my surprise, however, when he came back he made no effort to renew our conversation. He ignored me completely, and went to work at once to repair the damage to his wires, with his back to me.

PROFITABLE BUTTER MAKING ON THE FARM WITH THE HAND SEPARATOR AND STARTER

Modern Farm Dairy Room.

By NELSON W. HEPBURN,
University of Illinois.

The rapid development of the hand separator system has exerted a powerful influence in decreasing the amount of farm-made butter, since the farmer, unless he is receiving a special price for his butter, cannot begin to compete with the hand separator system. We find much of the dairy product that used to leave the farm in the form of butter, going to the local creamery or the centralizer, in the form of cream. Time and labor in these days are too valuable to spend in the making up of a product for which we receive less than we could before it was manufactured, as is largely the case when we are speaking of hand separator cream and country butter.

This, however, should be no discouragement to the person making butter on the farm, for a special market, provided he is receiving a price commensurate with the quality of butter he is expected to produce.

A slight knowledge of bacteriology teaches us that the scouring of milk, as well as the presence of many of the undesirable flavors, is due to inoculating it with these forms of bacteria and affording favorable temperature for their growth. The presence of large numbers of foreign bacteria is usually accompanied by unsanitary conditions of stables and utensils employed. So, by adopting the principles of common cleanliness, by an intelligent use of cold well water, for controlling temperature, and a reasonable amount of care to prevent odors from the outside air, we should be able to obtain cream for buttermaking with the desirable flavor and aroma.

From the standpoint of economy and quality, the hand separator and the use of starters are two of the most active agents in the hands of the farmer for securing a good grade of butter in an economical way; the hand separator, because by no other method can we secure skim milk in as good condition for feeding purposes, by no other means can we so nearly control the per cent. of fat in the cream, or accomplish the process so thoroughly and with so little labor. The idea that the only first class butter is made by the old-fashioned setting system is entirely false and out of date, and should be placed alongside the practice of planting potatoes at some particular quarter of the moon.

The use of starters on the farm, of course, presupposes more or less regularity in the handling of the product; that is, that the cream is held about the same length of time and that churning comes on regular days. This involves a little extra labor, but in no other way can we hope to secure the most desirable flavor and the uniformity from churning to churning which is so essential from the market standpoint. Conditions that affect our efforts to make the most desirable grade of butter are so variable that we can formulate no set of rules which we could follow for each lot of cream and expect to obtain similar results. To be successful in this line of work it is necessary that even the farm buttermaker familiarize himself with the conditions that effect his marketable product, and be able to meet the adverse condition when it confronts him. However, there are a few general considerations which, carefully followed out, will aid materially in securing the desired results.

Secure the milk in a cleanly manner, cool the cream as soon as possible after separation, before mixing with previous skimmings. After thoroughly cooling, transfer to the can in which it is allowed to accumulate for ripening. The temperature for holding should be as low as can be conveniently secured with the well water at hand. About 18 to 20 hours previous to churning the cream should be allowed to rise to a temperature of 60 to 70 degrees and starter, either natural or commercial, added at the rate of one gallon to ten gallons of cream. As soon as the cream has taken on a mildly acid flavor, which will probably occur in from 6 to 12 hours, it should be again cooled and held at churning temperature from two to three hours before putting into the churn. The use of the thermometer at this point is indispensable and no buttermaker can hope to secure desirable results without it.

After the cream is held for two or three hours it is ready to be strained into the churn. Churning is normally completed in from 30 to 35 minutes and should be stopped when the butter granules are the size of cracked corn or wheat grains. The buttermilk is then ready to be drawn, following which the butter may well be rinsed with a small amount of water previous to the washing. Washing is best accomplished by using about the same temperature. However, conditions may arise where it is desirable to use the wash water colder; in that case it should remain on the butter long enough to cool it thoroughly. Wash the butter by revolving the churn, containing butter and wash water, about ten times, then draw the wash water.

One of the common complaints made against dairy butter is grittiness, caused by the presence of undissolved salt. This can be overcome by using some water with the salt. Sprinkle the dry salt over the surface of the granular butter, one ounce or one and one-fourth ounces per pound of butter, together with about one ounce of water per pound of butter. After mixing by revolving the churn three or four times, the butter is ready for working, which may be successfully done on any of the hand workers or in the combined churn. When sufficiently worked, the salt should be dissolved and the butter should have taken on that appearance known as body. Sliding motions which tend to produce a greasy appearance should be avoided in working.

The forms of packages for butter are almost innumerable, but generally speaking, the package most desirable is the one that is standard for the locality where the butter is being made. For local town trade the common earthen jar has long given good satisfaction, but for other special markets the pound print put up on parchment paper and cartons is often preferred. In a word, we may say, use the package demanded by the consumer.

SOME POINTS IN BUYING TEXTILESBY CHARLOTTE M. GIBBS,
University of Illinois.

Two classes of cloth are manufactured from wool.

First: Wools are made usually of short wool carded and spun into yarn in which the threads lie in all directions. This is woven into cloth which usually has the surface heavily felted, so that all of the intersections of threads in weaving are covered. Here, then, is splendid opportunity for adulteration, since cotton or poor wool may be covered up by the surface felting.

Second: Worsted, the other class, is made from longer staple wool, combed and drawn until the fibers are parallel, then hard twisted. When woven, the ends of the threads do not project on the surface, and the finish is not intended to cover the weave, hence it is more difficult to adulterate unless entire cotton threads are woven with the worsted, and these are more easily detected than a mixture of cotton and wool, or shoddy in woolen cloth. Common examples of woolsens are flannels, broadcloth and venetian cloth; examples of worsteds are serge, challis, men's suitings and voile. Mohair is a worsted cloth woven of the wool of the Angora goat, with a warp usually of cotton or silk.

The most reliable tests for a mixture of cotton and wool are chemical or microscopic ones, but as these are not practical for the average buyer others must be sought. Wool has luster, and "kinks;" the ends of the threads are stiff and look rather wiry. When a sample is carried home, burning will serve to distinguish between the two. Wool burns slowly, chars, has an odor of burnt feathers, goes out easily, and leaves a crisp ash; cotton burns quickly, with a flame, with little odor, and leaves no ash.

A little practice in breaking the threads will help one to distinguish between the two; the difference is not one that can be easily explained, but the experienced housewife knows it well.

Legumes and Rock Phosphate. Dairyman and stockmen need grain farmers to furnish them with feeds for their herds. All of the manure produced goes to the farms where it is produced, and so where does the grain farmer get back his elements which he sells? This is the question in answering, the answer may be briefly stated: "Grow legumes and turn them under; apply raw rock phosphate."

325,000 IN ONE YEAR

THE IMMIGRATION TO CANADA
SURPASSES ALL RECORD.

The returns recently issued by the Canadian Immigration Branch shows that upwards of 325,000 persons arrived in Canada during the past twelve months, declaring their intention of becoming settlers in that country. Of this number about 130,000 were from the United States, the balance being from the British Isles and Northern Europe. It will thus be seen that the sturdy farming element that has gone forward from the United States is being splendidly supplemented by an equally sturdy settlement from across the seas. The lure of Canadian wheat, oats, barley and flax grown on the rich prairie of Western Canada is constantly attracting more and more, and year by year the tide of immigrants to the Western Canada plains increases; there is no ebb to this tide. The Canadian authorities are not surprised at the number from the United States being as large as it is but they did not look for so large an immigration from the old countries. Still, they will not be found unprepared. Reception halls are in readiness at all important points in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, surveyors were at work during the past season opening up new districts on which to place those seeking free homesteads of 160 acres each, railways have been projecting laterals from their main lines, and every provision has been taken to accommodate the newcomer. A recent dispatch from Antwerp reads: "The diversion of European emigration from the United States to Canada is said to be seriously affecting the Atlantic steamship lines. The Red Star today gives up to the America-Canada line two of the best special emigrant steamers afloat, the Gothland and the Samland. These vessels heretofore in the Antwerp-New York service are now to be operated from Rotterdam to Canadian ports."

On the date of the above dispatch word came to the Immigration branch that the "Vanguard of the 1911 army of United States settlers reached Winnipeg at 1:30 o'clock this morning. There was a solid train load of effects, comprising 41 carloads and two colonist sleepers attached to the train, which contained the members of 25 families. Every man Jack in the party is a skilled farmer, and all have come north prepared to go right on the land, which was purchased last year. They are equipped with everything that experience has shown is necessary to make a start on virgin prairie. In addition to machinery and household effects there were a large number of horses and cattle. Some of the farmers had also brought along gas tractors, which will be put right to work on ground breaking."

One of the agents of the Canadian government advises that it would appear as if each month of the present year would show a large increase over the past year. The demand for the literature of the department, describing the country and its resources, is greater than it ever has been.

WHY, YES, SHE GOT THE NOTE

Beautiful Roses Appreciated, but There Was a "Fly in the Ointment."

A young man whose gallantry is in excess of his means sought to remedy this defect and to save the expense of the money required for the purchase of flowers for his lady loves by arranging with a gardener to let him have a bouquet from time to time, in return for his castoff clothes. So it happened that one day he received a bunch of beautiful roses, which he at once dispatched to her house. In sure anticipation of a friendly welcome, he called on the young woman that evening. He got a frosty reception.

"Did—er—did you get my flowers today?" he was finally forced to ask.

"Yes, and the note that went with them."

"Note? Why, did I send a note?"

"You did. A disgraceful note, scrawled with a blunt pencil on dirty paper. Here it is. I don't understand it, and I don't think you are very humorous."

The note read as follows:

"Here's your flowers, but you owe me a pair of pants for 'em."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Breaking a Hobo's Heart.

Manager Gus Hartz was standing near the opera house box office when one of two panhandlers who had entered the lobby approached him, and, holding out an addressed and sealed envelope, begged for the price of a postage stamp.

"It's for me mudder, boss," he entreated. "You see wouldn't turn down er guy fer de price er de stamp, would you?"

"Never," said the manager, deftly grasping the envelope and throwing it through the box-office window. "Here Fred," addressing himself to Treasurer Fred Coan, "stamp this and have it mailed."

The velocity of the proceeding fairly took the panhandler's breath away. Then, backing away to where his partner awaited him, he whispered, "Nothin' doing, bo—the guy's wise."—Cleveland Leader.

NATIONAL CAPITAL AFFAIRS

Wise Pages of the Upper House

WASHINGTON. — Some person, speaking from the bottom of the well of truth, has said that no man is a hero to his valet. The philosophy of the observation might have been greatly strengthened if the sage had thought to add that no United States senator is any great shakes to a senate page.

There is a popular impression that the senate pages are studious youth with bulging foreheads, learned in the Constitution and deep in the mysteries of senate precedents.

These wrong impressions about the high constitutional atmosphere that surrounds a senate page come naturally enough from the superficial observation of visitors in the gallery. Looking down from there it is easy to suppose that when a senator claps his hands and a page hurries noiselessly to his side and inclines a respectful ear, that the fortunate youth is receiving information of the highest import. Doubtless he will write it down in his private diary before he sleeps that night, and in later years will publish it in his memoirs where eager millions will read it. Also doubtless he won't, for the chances are the distinguished senator merely requested the page to tell the bothersome constituent who has been waiting out in the marble room for the last hour, to wait another hour by which time the distinguished senator will have slipped out another door and gone to lunch.

If the senate page should take a notion to disclose the secrets of his prison house he could a tale unfold that would make the muckraking magazines look like periodicals subsidized by Wall street. He could tell exactly what that whispered message was that passed between a leader on one side at a critical moment during a roll call. He could tell what went on out in the cloakroom when a deal was on, trade one little bill for another little bill, and incidentally to break a party pledge and sell out a party measure. Even the familiar designations, by which pages know their masters would make mighty good copy. One senator somewhat known for his querulousness invariably is referred to by the fraternity as "Grandma," which is hardly parliamentary even in the cloakroom.

"Store" Revelation to New Solon

THERE is a mistaken idea ever present in the mind of a brand-new legislator when he arrives at Washington that all his stationery and stationery supplies will be furnished free.

Hardly has he been shown through the capitol by some older colleague than he becomes acquainted with the fact that down in the basement of the big gray building there is one of the most complete stationery stores in the United States. He is astonished at the cheapness of everything and marvels at the fact that there he can buy a thousand sheets of the finest linen paper, bearing at the top in deep old English engraved lettering the inscription, "House of Representatives, United States, Washington," for $2.40. He can get a high grade, fine finished cotton paper for $1.38 per thousand, engraving included, and another grade with handsome lithograph superscription for $1.

Later the congressman is told the reason for this, and along with that information it is explained to him that his stationery allowance will be $125. The reason for the cheapness of everything in capitol stationery headquarters is that the stationery store makes not a shadow of profit.

Another cause for remark in the stationary room in the capitol has been the tremendous supply of social stationery and pretty little desk ornaments and implements, such as attract the eye of women, in the stationery rooms, which may be purchased—handbags, fancy reticules, pocket-books, the faintest of note paper, scented and otherwise, pearl or silver handled desk implements—an endless array of pretty little knickknacks, which a mere man would scorn to use as an embellishment of an office desk.

The affable clerks of the stationery room will explain that this fancy goods department is an outgrowth of the habit of the American legislator to elect his whole family to office along with himself. The $125 goes a long way and the stationery room at Christmas, Easter and other gift-making seasons is as busy a mart as any similar store in the national capitol and everything at cost.

CAPT. JOHN M. BOWYER, U. S. N., superintendent of the naval academy at Annapolis, at the direction of the secretary of war has apologized to Prof. Henry A. Beers of Yale university and Miss Katherine Beers, his daughter, for the recent incident at Annapolis in which an attempt was made to exclude Miss Beers from social functions because she was earning her own living.

The incident aroused a big stir in capital circles, and Representative Korbly of Indiana brought the matter up in the house, charging that snobbery was a growing evil at the academy that called for immediate action. President Taft interested himself in the matter and directed Secretary Meyer to make a thorough investigation. According to the investigation made by the navy department, Miss Beers was employed as a companion to the wife of Lieut. Commander William T. Tarrant, who is engineer officer of the battleship Michigan of the Atlantic fleet. She was invited to one of the naval academy hops several weeks ago by a midshipman whose name has not been disclosed by the department. She attended the dance and shortly afterward left Annapolis for her home in New Haven. At the time of her departure she knew nothing of the incident in which she figured.

One of the officers on duty at Annapolis suggested to the midshipman, on the supposition that Miss Beers was a domestic, that she should not have been invited by the midshipman to the hop.

The midshipman, according to the report received at the department, replied that he disagreed personally with the view of his superiors at the academy. There was, however, nothing that he could do under the circumstances. The inquiry developed that Captain Bowyer was responsible for the suggestion that Miss Beers was not a desirable guest at academy social events.

Fly Models to Assist Aviators

THE Smithsonian Institution has received and soon will publish the fourth paper in a series dealing with the investigations on the flying organs of various insects and birds. These investigations, which were fostered by Secretary Langley, now deceased, with the hope that they would yield information useful to engineers and others interested in the problem of aviation, have been carried out under the direction of Professor von Lendenfeld of Prague university for ten years.

Professor von Lendenfeld believes that of all forms of insects, and indeed, of all flying animals, the blowfly furnishes the most promising pattern for a flying machine, and that a working model, should be built according to the pattern and experimented with.

The paper now in the hands of the printer was prepared by Dr. Wolfgang Ritter and describes the flying apparatus of the blowfly. The author, with minuteness characteristic of German scientists, discusses the anatomy of the structure and articulation of the wings and the functions of every muscle and joint used in flight.

Those already published are "The Structure of Wing Feathers," by Dr. E. Mascha; "The Clapping Organs Attaching the Hind to the Fore Wings in Hymenoptera," by Dr. Leo Walter, and "The Air Sacs of Pigeons," by Dr. Bruno Muller.

Dr. Ritter's paper is profusely illustrated with pictures showing the different experiments he made with the blowfly.

Another paper will be added soon to the Smithsonian miscellaneous collections, a "Bibliography of the Scientific Writings of R. E. C. Stearns," by Miss Mary R. Stearns. Accompanying it is a biographical sketch of Dr. William H. Dall.

POET OF SIERRAS NEARING END

WHERE HIS ASHES WILL BE LAID

ALTHOUGH Joaquin Miller, "the poet of the Sierras," so far recovered from a recent illness which threatened to prove fatal that he was able to return with his wife and daughter to his home on the heights overlooking Oakland and San Francisco bay, yet his friends entertain little hope that he will ever be fully restored to health. He is now in his seventieth year. Previous to his last illness he had been separated from his wife for thirty years, but the danger of his death happily reunited them, and now the aged poet is spending the remainder of his days amid his well-beloved hills, on the spot where he has created a characteristic home, called The Heights. His massive frame has weakened, his once keen eyes are dim, his flowing hair and beard are white, and the physicians who have climbed the wooded hills to minister to him declare there is little if any hope—that it is merely a matter of a few weeks when Joaquin Miller will have been gathered to his fathers. His ashes, according to his wish, will be scattered from the winds from the pyre in the hills back of The Heights, which marks the last resting place of his daughter, Maud, who died several years ago. The reunion with his wife may prolong his days, and the care that his other daughter, Juanita, bestows upon him may build up his withered strength a little, but there is hardly more than a shell for them to nurse.

Perhaps no more picturesque figure is extant in the literary history of California and the west than Joaquin Miller. He is a distinct type, seemingly inseparable from the environment in which he has lived these twenty years or more. He has gathered inspiration from the rolling green hills, from the ruddy sunsets, from the blue Pacific waters, from the fog banks that roll in with the nightfall, from the vista of land and sea as seen from his eyrie on The Heights, from the Golden Gate and the shadowy ships that sail through it into the rim of the horizon and are lost in the vapor's pall.

He has been, perhaps, too familiar to the residents of Oakland and neighboring suburbs to create the interest that he would if he should suddenly appear in some eastern city clad in his high top boots, buckskin clothing and wide brimmed sombrero, with his curly hair flowing from beneath its brim.

Even to this day, or perhaps it should be said up to the time of his illness, Joaquin Miller retained his grace and commanding aspect. He has lived much out of doors and has been browned by suns. With his own hands he has planted the hundreds of trees that surround the little collection of houses, the chapel and the funeral pyre, which constitute The Heights.

A few years ago the poet's mother died at the age of ninety. There was a strikingly beautiful attachment between the two, and since her death the decline has set in which is the basis of his present illness.

"More than twenty years ago," Miller wrote in an article published some time ago, "I sat down here on a mountain side with mother and began to plant trees. Men and women came to work and to rest with us, men and women from colleges and universities. No one was asked to come—no one was ever asked to go.

"More than twenty years ago, while feeling my way along here and trying to use what little common sense I then had, I wrote a small book, 'The Building of the City Beautiful'—

"You want to see San Francisco? Well, you must come to Oakland; and do you want to see Oakland and San Francisco and the bay of all bays on the globe, and the Golden Gate, at a glance and all together? Then you must go two miles to the northeast and then half a mile perpendicular. In short, you must come to The Heights, to the camp where Fremont tented half a century ago, and to the spot from which he viewed and named the now famous Golden Gate, long before gold was found."

The real name of the poet is Cincinnati Helme Miller. The pseudonym "Joaquin" was derived from his defense of the Mexican bandit, Joaquin Murietta, many years ago.

Miller was born in the Wabash district of Indiana on November 10, 1841, and in 1864 was taken to Oregon by his father. He had little schooling and early ran away from home, going to the California gold fields. He accompanied Walker on the Nicaragua expedition, lived among the Indians and Spaniards on the coast of California, and became familiar with their customs. He studied law, being graduated from Columbia college, in Oregon, in 1868. He practiced unsuccessfully in Idaho and turned express messenger. In 1863 he settled in Oregon and became editor of "The Eugene City Democratic Register," which was suppressed in the same year. In 1864 Miller returned to the law and practiced in Canyon City, Ore. Here he became popular, owing to his services against the warlike Snake Indians, and from 1866 to 1870 served as a judge in Grant county.

His first important attempts at writing were made here, and he tried to sell a collection of his poems under the title of "Songs of the Sierras" in the east. They did not find a ready market, and he finally went to England, where they were published and created a sensation. It was in London that Miller was recognized, petted, lionized and even overestimated perhaps.

The poet returned from England and went to Washington, and finally, in 1877, to California and settled at The Heights, where his retreat soon became the Mecca for literary people. At times persons with literary or artistic tendencies, forswearing the world for a time, have gone to Miller's home as a haven of refuge. Here are buried the bodies of Maud Miller, the poet's daughter, and of his mother.

It has been said that the poet desired to have his own body burned upon the pile of rough stones that cover his child's grave, but the truth of his request is that he be cremated and the ashes placed upon the pile, that the wind may scatter them far and wide over the land he loved so well.

His life has not been spent in the ways of ease and luxury, such as one usually associates with the existence of poets. He has "roughed it" and has lived hard. He has fought and has been beaten; he has fought and he has won.

Today he sits before his home on the veranda, with its trellised vines, and receives the care of wife and daughter. He sits by the hour gazing out from the secluded Heights upon the cities, the bay, the ships and the hills beyond that through twenty-five years or more he has watched and studied and loved. Every little attention that a woman knows so well how to bestow is showered upon the white haired man, the patriarch of the Oakland hills, known the world over for his flowery verse, his eccentricity, his love of the beautiful and of California.

To all letters soliciting a subscription, Samuel Rogers, the English banker-poet, approvingly quoted Lord Erskine as replying in this form of words:

"Sir, I feel much honored by your application to me, and I beg to subscribe"—here the reader reached the bottom of the page, and to learn the amount of the donation, had to turn over the leaf. There he found after the word subscribe, the formal conclusion—"myself your obedient servant."—Youth's Companion.

SCALP WAS BADLY AFFECTED

"I am more than gratified by the successful results I obtained by the use of the Cuticura Remedies. For several years my scalp was very badly affected with dandruff and scales. My scalp itched terribly at times and my hair fell out. My coat collar would be actually white with the dandruff that had fallen from my head. My profession being that of a barber, I was particular about having my hair in good condition, and was also in a position to try many lotions, etc., for the scalp. These had little or no effect. I had heard so much about the Cuticura Remedies that I resolved to try them. I shampooed my head with Cuticura Soap twice a week and after drying my head thoroughly, I anointed parts of my scalp with Cuticura Ointment. I was pleased from the outset, and continued to keep up this treatment. To think that only three cakes of Cuticura Soap and one and one-half boxes of Cuticura Ointment rid my head of this annoying trouble made me feel quite contented. I have now got a thick growth of hair and I am never troubled with any dandruff or itching of the scalp. There is no question but that the Cuticura Remedies cured me. I frequently recommend them to my customers, and they think a great deal of them." (Signed) John F. Williams, 307 Norfolk Street, Dorchester, Boston, Mass., July 28, 1910.

The Impossible. Andrew Carnegie, at a recent dinner in New York, said of a certain labor trouble:

"It is silly of employers to pretend in these troubles that they are always in the right. Employers are often in the wrong; often unreasonable. They often—like Mrs. Smith-Jones—ask impossible things."

"Mrs. Smith-Jones, taking a villa at Palm Beach, engaged for butler a stately old colored deacon.

"Now, Clay," she said to the old fellow, "there are two things I must insist upon—truthfulness and obedience."

"Yes, madam," the venerable servant answered, "and when yo' bids me tell yo' guests yo's out when yo's in, which shall it be, madam?"

Next! There were a couple of dandy fish lars in the Colonial lobby. We didn't have time to get their names, addresses and photographs, but we lingered long enough to hear the conversation. The poignant part thereof was as follows:

"How much did your fish weigh?" "I didn't have no hay scales with me, you nut. But when I pulled him out it lowered the lake four inches."

"Some fish," commented the other, without the quiver of an eyelash. "Reminds me of some good sport I had duck hunting last fall. I fired at a flock of ducks and gathered up four quarts of toes."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Raise Every Chicken

You Hatch

You can and will do it if you brood them in "LULABY" BROODERS and feed them the Park & Pollard Gritless-Chick and Growing Feeds.

You never saw chickens thrive if you have not used these feeds.

Your money back if you do not find them better than any other.

My Pleasant Experience. I used one of your Lulaby Brooders. I used the one of you last year five times. I never lost a chick. Did not have a single case of White Diarrhea in the five times I used it. Never had less than 25 chicks in a brooder at a time. Send me this one as soon as possible. I am now using this one. I took 60 chicks out of 60 eggs under the hen and put them into your brooder and all are fine.

The Park & Pollard Year Book and Almanac contains more boiled down facts about poultry, than any $1.00 book published. It is free for the asking. Write for it to-day, anyway.

We carry a full stock of these wonderful "Lulaby" Brooders, and guarantee satisfaction or your money back.

Come in our store—let us demonstrate the superiority of our Lulaby Brooder and Park & Pollard Feeds.

There is no man so poor as he who is rich in vain platitudes.

A conscience needs exercise to keep it in a healthy condition.

Don't believe all you hear, especially when it is about yourself.

Don't borrow trouble with the intention of returning it with interest.

The man who makes the most noise talking makes the least noise thinking.

The man who never gives up will some day have money out on interest.

Cheerfulness is about the only contagious thing that we aren't afraid of.

Beauty is only skin deep—and most of the pretty girls haven't much depth.

Some people rise by getting in on the ground floor of everything that comes along.

Every young man who wastes his youth is putting a mortgage on his prime.

When an artist marries his model they ought to be able to work "altogether."

Chicago still has nearly a half million people who haven't been indicted for bribery, as yet.

"Former Senator Aldrich," or "ex-Senator Aldrich" has a soothing dulcet sound to many ears.

Nat Goodwin will be an awfully unhappy man if he ever gets to that place where there are no marriages.

Lieutenant Hobson says he is after the alcohol peril, and expects to get it

—but who is going to get Richard P.

No man is as smart as his small children think he is—nor as big a fool as his grown-up children think he is.

When a girl plays a ragtime so that it sounds like a funeral march, it may be truthfully said that she is murdering the music.

A Washington man told the judge that he had scruples against spanking his wife. His wife certainly has the right system.

War in Mexico must be a very in-spid affair compared to the kind Sherman once referred to in language that has become famous.

Teddy Roosevelt is probably the highest paid editorial writer there is today—and yet we doubt if he could run a country newspaper.

A New York girl lost her mind while visiting in Philadelphia. Of course the police haven't a clue to the perpetrators of the theft as yet.

The man who is so constituted that you would be willing to do most any kind of a favor for him is the one who seems to need help the least.

A thorough investigation of the past activities of the Standard Oil company might illuminate many dark places in the political history of the country.

It is easy to be cheerful when those around you are cheerful—so, from a selfish standpoint it is worth while to try to make happy those you associate with.

Property on Wall street is said to be worth forty million dollars an acre—
and not a foot of it is broke to the plow, nor is the water fit for dairying pur-

In the continued and prolonged absence of any seismic disturbances along the New England shores we are inclined to fall into the erroneous belief that the country is struggling along without an ex-president.

A young man in Wyoming drove two miles alone before he discovered that his sweetheart had fallen out of the buggy. Love making in that state must lack some of the ardor that characterizes it around here.

Eastern profs. are getting it figured out so that by following a well laid out plan a person can live on 25 cents a day.
Some of them will figure it out pretty

GOT THE MEAT HE DEMANDED

Grumpy Man Wanted Restaurant Window Sample and the Paint on It Blistered.

Stepping into a small restaurant,
a grumpy old man demanded of the waiter a certain piece of meat he had in the show window.

"But," said the waiter, "we—"
"No buts," replied the old man.
"You bring me what I ask for, or I won't get anything here at all."

Rather than lose a customer the waiter did as he was told, and getting the piece of meat, took it back to be cooked.

After a long wait the meat was brought to the customer, who, instead of thanking the waiter, said: "Look here, you man, what is the matter with this meat?"

"Nothing is the matter with it, sir, except that the paint on it has formed a few blisters from the heat."

"Why, what do you mean by that?"
asked the old man.

"Simply this," replied the waiter.
"Those pieces of meat you saw in the window were not made to eat. They were made for advertising purposes, but you insisted, sir, upon having one of 'em."

ORPHANAGE DESTROYED

"Take 'em," she said, and throwing her whimpering burdens into the arms of the astonished attendants, she plunged back into the smoke. In a moment she emerged with another armload, then another.

Presently she was joined by Raymond Moore, a 15-year-old ward of the orphanage and Beatrice Sanford, one of the attendants and a young Methodist student. Two Miller babies—twins—were the wards of Miss Sanford.

Out of the sixty children who were rendered homeless by the fire, only eighteen have been provided for so far.
There now remains about forty for whom homes will have to be provided for in a short time, as they are left with practically no roof over their heads.

It is now the plan of the management of the orphanage to rent one of the large vacant houses in Lake Bluff, and house all children there who have not been provided for before that time.
The new home has not been provided for as yet but the deal is now pending, and a new home will be provided in a short time.

FAIRY TALES FOR CHILDREN

Lady Tennant Argues Little Ones Need Sustenance for Their Thoughts and Fancies.

"Let children have fairy tales,"
urges Lady Tennant in the London Times, on the ground that early childhood does not need instruction so much as shape and sustenance for its own thoughts and fancies. It is through the old stories and the works of great writers, she thinks, that children can best be put in possession of the freedom, which, in the words of Jean Paul Richter, makes them citizens of the divine city of Romance.

Reading aloud to children she regards as of far-reaching importance.
There is the instance of a child of five years who has been hearing with absorbing interest the story of Joseph and his brethren. Some days after he was telling his mother a story and with glowing eyes he said: "And dreaming, I saw a king's throne, and the king's servant standing beside the throne." It was not difficult to trace the source of the impression that had led him to clothe his thoughts in such language.

Let the children have the old books read to them. There will come days when they will prefer to read an excellent modern detective story, or to buy a magazine. We must remind ourselves that possibly they would be prigs if they did otherwise; nor should we, I think, on any account check reading of any kind. But in the early days when they are still being read to, when they are so young that it lies in the mother's choice what they shall be hearing, then, I say, let them hear the old books, or, if the choice fall on books of later date, let them be the works of great writers.

ERSKINE ON SCARLET LETTER

Hawthorne's Masterpiece Great in Its Universal Theme, Elevated Tone and Simple Treatment.

The greatness of the story lies in its universal theme, its elevated tone, and the extreme simplicity of its treatment. The theme is the effect of sin upon the soul that commits it—especially of secret sin, since Dimmesdale's experience makes the tale. All the characters are noble, as in a Greek story—strongly developed in themselves, and holding high position in the community, so that their experiences are large and important, as many critics have remarked, like the heroic adventure of Attile tragedy.
This resemblance of tone is increased by the sense of destiny and retribution in the romance, dark and inexorable as ever the will of the gods was imagined by ancient poets.

It is a kind of impertinence to speak of the technical greatness of such a masterpiece as "The Scarlet Letter." Yet the reader would be indeed thankful who failed to note how much of his pleasure is in the solemn, musical cadence with which the story moves. The lofty manner extended even to the dialogues, so that the varied characters speak alike in a sombre eloquence permissible in romance.—Erskine: "Leading American Novellists."

"Jumped Seven Feet."
"Any news down my way?" repeated the farmer, as he stopped his team and bit a chew off his plug. "Well, I kin give you a little bit, I guess. It hain't earthquakes nor cyclones, but it does purty well for our place."

"Well?" queried the tollgate man.
"Well, the news is that Jim Wil-lam's wife's canary bird got out of the cage the other day and she had to chase it more'n two hours to get it back."

"That isn't much news."
"Nope, I s'pose not, but I was saying the best for the last."

"And what is it?"
"Why, a tin peddler came along and bet Joe Harkins that he could outjump him, and Joe held his breath and jumped seven feet and won the bet, and it's already settled that we are to run him for the legislature
next fall."

Too Great in Volume.
The importance of art as a vehicle of knowledge is less appreciated because its results are so common.

Poor Paints Expensive at any Price

People who want things cheap generally get them—an honest, reliable and durable job of painting demands an honest price.

The lowest bid does not necessarily mean the cheapest job, since the first cost of a poor job is only the beginning—the necessary burning and scraping when it cracks, scales and checks is a second expense greater than the first.

I can give you a durable and truly economical job because I use the highest grade materials—CARTER PURE WHITE LEAD, pure linseed oil, turpentine and colors. I am a skilled mechanic. I know how to handle surfaces. See me before painting.

Resolutions of Respect. Whereas death has again crossed the threshold of our lodge and removed from our midst our beloved sister, Lizzie Runyard, who departed this life May 3, 1911,

Resolved, that while we bow in humble submission to the divine will of our Heavenly Father, we as members of Lakeside Rebekah Lodge No. 82, tender to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and to each of the sorrowing ones our fraternal regards in the dark hours of distress and sorrow. We commend them to the care of a Heavenly Father who doeth all things well.

Resolved, that the charter of our lodge be draped in mourning for a period of 30 days, and these resolutions be spread upon the records of our lodge and a copy under seal of our lodge be forwarded to the family of our deceased sister.

You use it as an outdoor room in summer for the family gathering, to entertain your guests—to work and amuse yourself in. The porch room is one of the newest and most delightful ideas in suburban life. But the porch needs for the varied functions it performs, illumination at night and the MAZDA LAMP is the thing for this. Some of our customers go further and arrange wiring so that ornamental lamps may be placed on the tables.

Let us explain some of the plans of our lighting experts covering this service. You will be interested.

DIAZ WILL RETIRE

PRESIDENT IN MANIFESTO SAYS WILL QUIT WHEN PEACE IS RESTORED.

REBEL LEADER HALTS ARMY

Madero Proposed to Assassinate Mexico City With 20,000 Men—Abandons Siege of Juarez Fearing Complications With United States.

Mexico City.—In a manifesto to the Mexico people President Diaz announced that he will resign his office as soon as peace shall be restored.

In this manner the president has virtually acceded to the demands of Francisco I. Madero that he make an announcement of such intention.

As to when peace is actually restored General Diaz reserves the right to be the judge. In the words of the manifesto, it will be "when, according to the dictates of my conscience, I am sure that my resignation will not be followed by anarchy."

The president declared that his determination not to relinquish the presidency at this time was not due to vanity or love of power, because as he pointed out, power at this time had no attraction, accompanied as it is, by tremendous responsibilities and worry. He said he was prompted solely by a desire to conserve the best interests of his country.

The president made it clear that he does not propose to abandon the presidency while his country is at war and that he would not do so at any time under compulsion.

El Paso, Tex.—Two hours before word came from Mexico City that General Diaz had announced his intention of resignation the Mexican rebel army had begun breaking camp around Juarez preparatory to marching upon Mexico City, capital of the republic.

Preparations for the long march followed an announcement by Francisco I. Madero, Jr., provisional president, that he expected to be before Mexico City at the head of 20,000 troops within thirty days and that his troops would be kept busy fighting until the federal troops had been completely conquered.

When Madero heard of the proposed resignation of President Diaz he immediately gave orders to have the troops stop marching. Couriers were sent ahead to halt the advance guard also.

Madero's announcement of the proposed march southward and his abandonment of the proposed attack on Juarez was due to his fear of complications with the United States, if the international border warfare is continued. His orders directed all revolutionists to withdraw from the frontier.

In a manifesto to his army, he cited the Douglas (Ariz.) incident and declared that while the taking of Juarez might be an immense military advantage, it would bring about complications with a nation "which has always given us proofs of its friendship," and with whom an international conflict would be probable.

SEEK "HIGHER UP" BRIBERS

Columbus (Ohio) Prosecutor Intimates More Will Be Indicted—Lobbyists Take Fright, Leave City.

Columbus, Ohio.—Prosecutor Turner indicated that indictments for perjury were probable as a result of evidence given before the grand jury in connection with the bribery investigation.

It also was made clear that legislators are not alone to be punished for connection with bribes, but that lobbyists also will be indicted. If it is found sufficient testimony can be obtained to bring about convictions.

The intimation was given out that the investigation of bribe offers would not be confined to men who handled the money, but those who supplied it—the men "higher up" would not be immune.

Many of the well known lobbyists, who have been coming to Columbus for years are conspicuous by their absence at this time. Some are reported to have left the state.

SISTERS IN A SAD REUNION

Four Widows of Railroad Engineers, All Killed in Wrecks, to Meet at Funeral of Last Victim.

Huntington, W. Va.—Four sisters, all widows of railroad engineers killed in wrecks, met at the funeral of Engineer Thomas Plicher of this city, who was killed in a wreck of the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad near Thurmond. Mr. Plicher was one of four engineers who married four sisters, the Misses Garner of Albemarle county, West Virginia. Each met death in his cab, each was the engineer of a fast express train, and the fireman of each was killed with him, although no passengers were hurt.

Colorado Shy One Senator. Denver, Col.—The joint assembly of the legislature was dissolved after taking several ballots for United States senator without breaking the deadlock which has lasted since early in January. Colorado, therefore, will be represented by only one senator, a Republican, for two years.

FIND NEW EVIDENCE

POOLE HELD MRS. GUNNESS A MODEL WIFE.

Fowler (Ind.) Farmer Said to Have Asserted He Would Be Rich With Mate Like Her.

Fowler, Ind.—Preparations for a continuation of the search for more bodies on the Poole "death farm" four miles from here went forward with vigor. Simultaneously a new and startling story having to do with Poole's state of mind reached the little Indiana town. Francis Moyer, a neighbor of Poole, is responsible for the statement.

According to Moyer's story, Poole was a great admirer of Mrs. Belle Gunness, the Laporte woman whose suitors disappeared as mysteriously as Poole's farm hands, and upon whose farm bodies were found. In a family conversation at the Poole home at which Moyer was present Poole is declared to have remarked that if he had a wife like Belle Gunness he would have been wealthy long ago. He is also alleged to have said that the "cheapest way to pay farm hands was with a gun or club, anyway."

Moyer further said that he had a talk seven or eight years ago with Ward Banes, a nephew of Poole, and at that time Banes told Moyer that it was the impression among the relatives that Poole had killed a farm hand and buried him in the locust grove east of the house.

Another sensational statement in this connection is attributed to Manley Marlowe, brother-in-law of Poole, by a Lafayette (Ind.) newspaper. It is said that recently Marlowe said positively that he "could put his foot on the grave of another man on the Poole farm."

The anger of the inhabitants of the county has not cooled with the arraignment of the prisoner and his retention behind prison bars without bonds. A band of villagers turned out to "look over" the jail. They could not see within and made no attempt to enter, but they seemed to find enjoyment in standing about and watching the place.

WILL PASS ON M'LEAN CASE

Supreme Court Holds Against Cartier in Hope Diamond, Issue—Jury to Decide.

Washington.—Holding that the affidavits of Edward B. McLean and his wife, Evelyn Walsh McLean, in defense of the suit of Cartier, the New York jeweler, to recover $180,000, the purchase price of the celebrated Hope diamond, are sufficient in law, Justice Barnard of the supreme court of the District of Columbia refused to grant the motion of the plaintiffs for summary judgment. He declared the McLeans entitled to have a jury pass on the issue.

While the McLeans contended in their answer that Cartier misrepresented the value of the gem, superstition as to the ill-fortune that has followed owners of the Hope diamond is said to have something to do with the case.

1 DEAD; 2 HURT IN "JOY RIDE"

Fourth Member of Newburg (N. Y.) Party Missing After Automobile Accident.

Newburg, N. Y.—One woman was killed, a man and a woman were fatally hurt and a fourth person is missing as a result of a disastrous "joy ride". John Campbell, a chauffeur, and Frank Minerly took a new automobile from a local garage about 2 o'clock in the morning and, with Mrs. Anna Tomer and Mrs. Pearl Grant, went out for a ride. About four miles from the city the car ran into a ditch struck a wall and turned over.

Mrs. Tomer was crushed to death under the car, Mrs. Grant was hurt about the head and Campbell suffered a broken arm and fractured ribs. Minerly disappeared. Campbell is liable to prosecution for a misdemeanor in taking the car and for manslaughter under the new state law.

BUYS ROAD FOR $2,500,000

Illinois Central Bids in Indianapolis Southern at Foreclosure Sale.

Effingham, Ill.—The Indianapolis Southern railroad was sold at auction here for $2,500,000 to the Illinois Central railroad. The sale was a mortgage foreclosure proceedings brought by Charles A. Peabody and Alexander S. Hackstaff of New York. Walter S. Horton, special master, conducted the sale and Blawitt Lee, general solicitor of the Illinois Central, bid in the property.

Bridge Collapses Under Workmen. Valparaiso, Ind.—A 200-foot wooden bridge over Long lake, a summer resort near here, being constructed for the Valparaiso & Northern Interurban railroad, collapsed and tumbled into the lake, a complete wreck. Two score of Italian workmen were carried down with the bridge, but all were rescued.

PROBE IS ILLEGAL

COURT DECLARES LORIMER INQUIRY BY LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE IS VOID.

ORDERS RELEASE OF TILDEN

Habeas Corpus Writs Issued in Contempt Proceedings Are Sustained and Bankers Will Not Have to Appear Before State Senate.

Chicago.—Declaring the entire inquiry being conducted by the Helm committee into the election of Senator Lorimer to be without warrant of law, Judge A. J. Pettit sustained the writs of habeas corpus issued to prevent Edward Tilden, William C. Cummings and George M. Benedict from being taken before the bar of the state senate at Springfield to answer contempt proceedings.

He ordered the immediate release of the relators and assessed the costs of the hearing against the senate, every contention of the attorneys for the senate being denied.

One concession was made, however—the right of appeal made possible by the entry of judgment for costs against the respondents.

If the case is reviewed by some appellate tribunal, it will be appealed in the name of E. H. Hatfield, assistant sergeant-at-arms of the senate, who served the warrants on the packer and his associates more than a week ago.

Taking immediate advantage of this entry, John J. Healy, counsel for the Helm committee, prayed for appeal and was allowed ten days in which to file a bill of exceptions.

The motion was granted and bond of $250 was required of the appellant.

It is conceded by those most closely connected with the investigation of the Lorimer scandal that this decision of Judge Pettit practically means the end of the Helm committee's activities, although another meeting of the committee will be held in Springfield.

Whether the investigation will proceed, it is stated, will depend largely upon the nature of the testimony brought out by the witnesses who have been subpoenaed to answer before the committee.

WIFE TRIES TO RUN ROAD

Husband Gets Divorce—Tells Court of His Troubles in Managing Missouri Southern.

St. Louis.—How a woman disorganized the entire working force of a railroad was told in Judge Kinsey's court. The tale won a divorce for John E. Frederick.

Frederick is general manager of the Missouri Southern railroad, which starts at Leeper, Mo., and runs through the sawmill belt in the southeastern part of the state. It wouldn't be running anywhere if his wife, Jessie, had remained at the company headquarters, Frederick testified.

"The railroad company built a clubhouse for its employees at Leeper," he said. "Officials, office employees, and clerks had lodgings in the clubhouse, and all went well until I got married and took my wife there to live. She disrupted the entire working force of the road. She wanted me to discharge the general auditor. She nagged the stenographers, and her constant gossiping kept everybody in hot water."

FLAYS DYNAMITERS

ROOSEVELT DENOUNCES BOMB PLOTTERS IN LOS ANGELES.

Says Fact of Men Being Union Laborers Is No Excuse for Attack on the Prosecution.

New York.—In the course of a signed article in the forthcoming Outlook dealing with the Los Angeles Times dynamiting, under the title, "Murder Is Murder," Col. Theodore Roosevelt says:

"If the explosion was not an accident, but the deliberate act of any man or men, it was an outrage of dastardly iniquity, for it was one of these crimes in which the murderer, in order to gratify his spite against an individual, not merely wrecked that individual's property, but with callous indifference takes the lives of scores of innocent people as an incident to the achievement of his sinister and criminal purpose."

"The men responsible for dynamiting the Los Angeles Times building are responsible not only for the wreck of the newspaper offices, but for the loss of many lives."

"It happens that the men whom he has now arrested are members of a labor organization, just as men whom he formerly arrested were members of the Republican or Democratic parties or of great and wealthy corporations."

"No worse service can be rendered by labor union leaders to the cause of unionism than that which they render when they seek to identify the cause of unionism with the cause of any man guilty of a murderous attack of this nature."

"I have no idea whether the men arrested on Mr. Burns' statements are or are not guilty; the labor leaders in question have no idea whether or not they are."

"They are entitled to an absolutely fair trial. If they have no money to provide counsel for themselves, then it would be entirely proper for any body of men to furnish them the requisite funds, simply as an incident in securing them a fair trial. But it is grossly improper to try to create a public opinion in favor of the arrested men simply because the crime of which they are accused is committed against a capitalist or a corporation, and because the men who are charged with committing it are members of a labor union."

BOMB SUSPECTS ARE HELD

McNamara Brothers Are Arraigned on 19 New Indictments Charging Them With Murder.

Los Angeles, Cal.—J. J. McNamara, the Indianapolis union official, and his brother, J. B. McNamara, were arraigned on 19 new indictments charging them with murder in connection with the Los Angeles Times disaster, October 1 last.

William Caplan, M. A. Schmidt, John Doe, Jane Doe, Richard Doe and John Stiles were also named in the indictments. The name of Ortle McNamagal was not mentioned.

The courtroom was jammed with people, all but two of them men, and most of them obviously laboring men, when the brothers were led in by Sheriff W. A. Hammel and attended by a dozen officers. There was no demonstration.

No plea was entered, Attorney Rapaport, counsel for the defendants, having asked for and secured a postponement of the case until June 1.

Health For Sick Women

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, or secured so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Almost every woman you meet has either been benefited by it, or knows some one who has.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing over one million one hundred thousand letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved many women from surgical operations.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is made exclusively from roots and herbs, and is perfectly harmless.

The reason why it is so successful is because it contains ingredients which act directly upon the female organism, restoring it to healthy and normal activity.

Thousands of unsolicited and genuine testimonials such as the following prove the efficiency of this simple remedy.

Coloma, Wisconsin.—"For three years I was troubled with female weakness, irregularities, backache and bearing down pains. I saw an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. After taking several bottles I found it was helping me, and I must say that I am perfectly well now and can not thank you enough for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."
—Mrs. John Wentland, R. F. D., No. 3, Box 60, Coloma, Wisconsin.

Women who are suffering from those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of these facts or doubt the ability of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore their health.

JUAREZ IS STORMED

REBELS IGNORE MADERO AND GIVE BATTLE TO FEDERAL TROOPS.

FIVE AMERICANS ARE SLAIN

Insurrectos Capture All Customs Houses, Two Bridges and Bull Ring—Gen. Navarro Reported Wounded—Loss Unknown.

El Paso, Tex.—Insurrection in the ranks of General Madero's army caused a fierce attack on Juarez by 150 rebels and, after a day of skirmishing, culminated in a careful retreat by the insurrectos.

The rebels not only succeeded in capturing some of the important federal outposts, but carried the fighting into the town. The casualties of the insurrectos and federals are not known, but five people on the American side of the line were killed and at least twelve wounded.

When the bullets began to fall like hail in the streets of El Paso Col. Steever, in command of the Fourth United States Cavalry, sent couriers to Generals Madero and Navarro bearing this message:

"In the name of the president of the United States I hereby protest against men under your command handling their arms in such a way that bullets fall into United States territory, as is happening."

But the bullets continued to fall, and Colonel Steever later wired to Washington for instructions.

Before withdrawing, the insurrectos had captured all the customs houses, the two bridges joining Juarez and El Paso and the bull ring.

It is believed by many that Juarez would have been taken had it not been for conflicting orders from Madero. Early in the day Madero undertook to open negotiations with the federals for an armistice. The negotiations failed and Madero gave notice that he purposed making a general attack. Shortly afterwards he countermanded this order and said there would be no attack.

Generals Pasqual Orozco and Panchito Villa, a reformed bandit, commanding a section of Madero's army, disregarded Madero and made the attack. Madero issued a statement declaring that he had not been obeyed and was not responsible.

In the fighting it is said that General Navarro was wounded. It is not known whether or not the wound is serious.

The fighting started when about a dozen insurrectos emerged from the barren hills around Juarez and, skulking along through the shrubbery toward the federal outposts, fired repeatedly at a squad of federals crouched up in an adobe house. The federals soon left the house and fled, pursued by the insurrectos, who were headed by a Canadian named W. H. McKenzie. At the first few shots two federals toppled over. Soon the federals abandoned the trenches and the insurrectos fired intermittently for a few hours without advancing. At last the federals brought their artillery into action and heavy cannonading began. They gauged their fire well and not only shot shrapnel into the insurrecto advance, but far into the outlying forces of the rebel camp near "Peace Grove," where the commissioners were to have met.

The insurrectos, however, took advantage of the river bank and used it for protection, as the federals had been ordered not to shoot into El Paso. They came as far as the Santa Fe bridge, which joins Juarez and El Paso, driving the federals back into town and taking possession of the customs houses. Carrying the fight into Juarez, the rebels entered the town, and for four hours kept up a continuous fire. Insurrecto reinforcements reached the bridge, but did not fire, and withdrew at dark under orders of their chiefs.

FREE LIST BILL IS PASSED

House by Vote of 236 to 109 Adopts Farmers' Bill—Now Goes to Senate.

Washington.—By the overwhelming vote of 236 to 109 the farmers' free list bill passed the house amid Democratic applause.

There were 24 Republicans voting for the bill on final passage, made up of the progressives from the middle west.

It is believed the decisive victory the bill got in the house will go far towards securing for it consideration in the senate, although it may not pass that body.

The Republicans voting for the bill were Anthony, Anderson, Davis, Hanna, Hubbard, Jackson, Kent, Kopp, La Follette, Lenroot, Lindbergh, Madison, Miller, Morgan, Merz, Murdock, Nelson, Norris, Roberts (Nov.), Stenerson, Volstead, Warburton, Berger (Socialist), Helgeson, Akin (N. Y.).

FOOD IN SERMONS

Feed the Dominie Right and the Sermons Are Brilliant.

A conscientious, hard-working and successful clergyman writes: "I am glad to bear testimony to the pleasure and increased measure of efficiency and health that have come to me from adopting Grape-Nuts food as one of my articles of diet."

"For several years I was much distressed during the early part of each day by indigestion. My breakfast seemed to turn sour and failed to digest. After dinner the headache and other symptoms following the breakfast would wear away, only to return, however, next morning."

"Having heard of Grape-Nuts food, I finally concluded to give it a trial. I made my breakfasts of Grape-Nuts with cream, toast and Postum. The result was surprising in improved health and total absence of the distress that had, for so long a time, followed the morning meal."

"My digestion became once more satisfactory, the headaches ceased, and the old feeling of energy returned. Since that time I have always had Grape-Nuts food on my breakfast table."

"I was delighted to find also, that whereas before I began to use Grape-Nuts food I was quite nervous and became easily wearied in the work of preparing sermons and in study, a marked improvement in this respect resulted from the change in my diet."

"I am convinced that Grape-Nuts food produced this result and helped me to a sturdy condition of mental and physical strength."

"I have known of several persons who were formerly troubled as I was, and who have been helped as I have been, by the use of Grape-Nuts food, on my recommendation." Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich.

POTATO PROFITS IN IDAHO

The modest potato is not sufficiently taken into account as a producer of profit for the man who tills the soil.

We hear about the romance of Wheat, the kingly rule of Corn, the commercial dignity of Oats and Alfalfa, of Barley and Rye, and we count them as sources of great wealth for those who make the earth their servant.

But, granting to the grains and forages the credit that is due, there are wide stretches of land in Idaho producing cash yields from potatoes that make the average grain production of states farther east appear exceedingly small.

And there are so many more acres, of the same kind, that have not yet been given a chance to show what they can do, that the money-making possibilities of Idaho, so far as potatoes alone are concerned, cannot be estimated.

Idaho won national publicity in 1910 as the result of the awarding of prizes of $500 and $250, given by Mr. D. B. Burley of Salt Lake City, Utah, for the best and second best yields of potatoes produced on a single acre of land in territory tributary to the Oregon Short Line, Pacific & Idaho Northern, Idaho Northern, Idaho Southern and Payette Valley railroads.

The Oregon Short Line, together with the affiliated lines mentioned above, traverses the states of Idaho, Utah, Oregon, Washington, Montana and Wyoming, so it will be readily seen that the winning of prizes for which there were competitors from so wide a territory was an accomplishment of great importance to the victorious state and of lasting credit to the successful growers.

The results of this contest, participated in by so many of the most progressive farmers in the prescribed district, were amazing, and the following account of those results, with figures showing what the returns signify in the matter of profits from the land, should prove interesting to everyone concerned in agricultural affairs.

Through Mr. L. A. Snyder, the first prize of $500 was won by Twin Falls county, Idaho, with the "Dalmony Challenge" variety of potatoes. The second prize of $250 went to Canyon county, Idaho, through Mr. W. B. Gilmore, with the "Peachblow" variety.

On his winning acre of Idaho land Mr. Snyder raised 645 bushels of potatoes, weighing 38,685 pounds. The culls weighed 4,150 pounds, leaving 34,535 pounds of the finest marketable potatoes, or about 675 bushels.

At 70 cents per 100 pounds, or 42 cents per bushel, the price Mr. Snyder received, the one prize acre produced in money, therefore, the sum of $241.74, besides the 4,150 pounds, or almost 70 bushels, in culls, which were available for home use.

Mr. Snyder has won the Commercial Club of Twin Falls some further facts showing the possibilities of potato raising in his section of the country. He reports that from three acres of land he harvested 895 sacks of potatoes, averaging 110 pounds to the sack. He sold 1,500 bushels at 42 cents per bushel, receiving $630, and he had 75 sacks left for seed.

An average gross profit of $210 per acre, when we consider how much smaller is the average gross profit from an acre of grain, gives the reader a fair idea of what the intensive potato farming opportunities of Idaho really are.

Going a little more extensively into figures, we may safely presume that the average family of, say, five persons consumes about five pounds of potatoes per day. That ought to be a liberal estimate—a pound of potatoes per day for each member of the family, large or small.

The 38,685 pounds of potatoes raised by Mr. Snyder on his prize acre of Idaho land would, therefore, supply the potato needs of more than 22 such families for a year, allowing each family 1,725 pounds, or 28½ bushels.

It is fair to say that a $30 gross yield from an acre of wheat is a good return. So we see that Mr. Snyder's prize acre of potato land brought forth as much money as would eight acres of wheat land.

If Mr. Snyder were to realize from ten acres of his potato land as well as he did from the three acres which gave him $630, he would have $2,100 at the end of the season, besides more than enough spuds for his own use and for the next season's planting.

There's a "real money" in Idaho potatoes.

"The combination that won the Burley prize," says Mr. Snyder, "was the most productive soil in the West, climate unexcelled, plenty of water for irrigation at all times, one of the best varieties of spuds, and a man with some experience and not afraid of work."

His words make clear the advantages and possibilities of the Oregon Short Line country. All of the farmers who entered the contest in which Mr. Snyder carried off first honor came out wonderfully well. Mr. Gilmore harvested 87,476 pounds of "Peachblow" potatoes from the acre that won for him the second prize, and many others were close competitors.

Added encouragement for those who have never tried potato growing as a profit-making business is found in the fact that Mr. Snyder's potato experience began only five years ago.

Up to 1905, when he moved to Idaho, he had lived upon cattle and hay ranches, had engaged in dairy, livery and mining work, but had not had experience as a farmer. He took up potato growing in Idaho because he thought it offered an agreeable and profitable occupation, and he has made the results of each year better than those of the year before.

Speaking a short time ago, Mr. Snyder said: "I have always said that we have the best irrigated country in the United States. Mr. Burley gave us a chance to prove it, and it was as much the opportunity of showing that we could make good, as the money, which induced me to go into this competition."

Notwithstanding his achievement, Mr. Snyder does not believe that his record will stand. He has too great a faith in the potato industry and in Idaho to permit such an opinion. "I do not think we have reached the limit, by a long way," he remarks, confidently, and there are thousands who are familiar with that country who are ready to echo the assertion.

The fact is that large profits from potato raising in Idaho are the rule, not the exception. H. P. Frodsham, a farmer in the American Falls district, commonly takes 500 bushels from an acre, his yield per acre thus being, at 42 cents per bushel, $210.

Someone who knows the conditions in and the possibilities of Idaho has said that "it is a maxim in southern Idaho that the new settler, with little or no capital or implements, but with a willingness to work, can plant potatoes on his irrigated farm the first year and make a good living for his family, besides laying aside money to make all necessary payments on his land."

William B. Kelley, who owns a ranch near Gooding, says: "We get so many potatoes to the acre that we don't stop to count the sacks."

Samuel Lewis, also living near Gooding, reports as follows: "Potatoes grow large and thick. Six potatoes from my field weighed 21 pounds. The crop runs 500 to 600 bushels to the acre, and can always be depended upon."

The price received by Mr. Snyder for his prize-winning potatoes does not by any means represent the "top" of the Idaho market. Much higher prices have been commanded at various times, yet at the 42-cent rate received by Mr. Snyder his profits were very large.

Scores of instances may be cited to show what the lands of Idaho hold in store for those who will put forth the effort that must precede success.

Those who have succeeded in this one task of potato raising, trace their accomplishments to industry, of course, and to a study of conditions and needs. But they could not have reaped such harvests if industry and determination had not been fortified by ideal conditions of climate and soil.

Such conditions prevail in the agricultural districts of Idaho. There the ground is rich and eager. There the climate is conducive to the outdoor task. There the scheme of irrigation has been so well prepared and is so unerring in its supply that growing crops have water when they need it.

With water, sunshine and cultivation to bless the crops at proper intervals, the growing of potatoes, or any other agricultural or horticultural industry in Idaho, is as sure of abundant cash returns as any of man's tasks can be.

Now He Doesn't Believe It.

A Cleveland man was reading some jokes about how the English weren't so slow as they are supposed to be to get a joke. He believed it, too. So he tried his theory on a British guest of his.

"Did you ever hear Mark Twain's joke about how the report of his death had been greatly exaggerated?" he asked.

"No," answered the Englishman, eagerly, "but I'll wager it was good. What was it?"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A READER CURES HIS CONSTIPATION—TRY IT FREE

Simple way for any family to retain the good health of all its members.

The editors of "Health Hints" and "Questions and Answers" have one question that is put to them more often than any other, and which, strangely enough, they find the most difficult to answer. That is "How can I cure my constipation?"

Dr. Caldwell, an eminent specialist in diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels, has looked the whole field over, has practiced the specialty for forty years and is convinced that the ingredients contained in what is called Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, bring about a lasting cure. Among its strongest supporters are Mr. John Graveline of 98 Milwaukee Ave., Detroit, Mich.; Mr. J. A. Vernon of Oklahoma City and thousands of others. It can be obtained of any druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, or if you want to try it first a free sample bottle can be obtained by writing the doctor.

To Get the Best Light.

When using oil lamps the housewife is always very careful that every part of the lamp is scrupulously clean and the burner is boiled to remove any accumulation of dirt. She forgets, though, that her gas jet is just as likely to accumulate soil. Often there is quite a little collection of dust and if this is cleared away the improvement in the light is noticeable.

Sufficient.

Men's Week at the Globe

Beginning Saturday we shall devote the next 7 days to a special display and sale of men's high class clothes

We have set aside this particular week as one in which to prominently feature men's wear; to demonstrate our supremacy as a style store and to prove, beyond dispute, our ability for underselling.

We have assembled over 2,500 handsome new spring suits to show you on this occasion---the largest number of fine clothes ever gathered under one roof in Waukegan.

Just think, sir, what a grand showing these 2,500 or more suits make; what a vast range of styles, patterns and colorings are embraced and how easy it would be for you to pick out a suit that measures up to your most exacting idea.

You'll find in this broad selection the very best garments that skilled craftsmen can turn out; clothes of national reputation, such as Kaufman's Pre-shrunk garments, and a half-dozen other notable lines. Suits that are designed for discriminating men; masterfully tailored; shape retaining; perfect fitting. Styles for conservative dressers and for young men who seek the more extreme in fashion.

Quite a sprinkling of these new spring suits will be found displayed in our three large Genesee street windows, but we want you to see them all, so drop in the store at your first leisure---we'll be glad to show you whether you are figuring on buying or not.

Featuring 3 Lines of Suits at $10.00, $15.00 and $20.00

If there ever was an opportunity for economy it's afforded in these three suit specials. We're safe in saying that a five dollar bill can be saved on any suit you may select and that is surely worthy of any man's consideration. You'll have no trouble in finding a suit to your liking at either of these three prices; no difficulty in getting a perfect fit, either. Of course, if you want to pay $25 or $30 we've got a splendid variety to show you and the values are equally as these advertised at

A Good Christian.

One of those young women who take the world and themselves so seriously that they lapse, at times, into a comatose mental state was in a department store making a small purchase and, as the saleswoman was writing out a slip, proffered a dollar bill.

"What denomination?" inquired the saleswoman, without glancing up. "Episcopalian," admitted the young woman on the other side of the counter, suddenly brought back to the department store from her mental wandering in other lands.

It Comes From Paris.

Quite the newest dining fad in Paris is to have everything of the very simplest. Four simple but, of course, exquisitely served dishes take the place of the usual long dinner, and the table decoration consists of a crystal or cut glass bowl of violets. The effect is charming.

Retain the Tinderbox.

Matches have not yet displaced the tinderbox in certain rural districts of Spain and Italy.

No Advancement.

Experts in Brazilian agriculture unite in affirming that methods of growing tobacco, gathering the crop and curing it have changed little, if at all, since the days of the early colonist, two centuries ago. Practically nowhere is there any idea of tilling the soil and cultivating the crop with an instrument more modern than the spade.
